

3' Days of Functional Anatomy

with Bodydynamic Analyst Lene Wisbom & Ivan Raphael

A deepening into using the functional anatomy as a therapist, supervisor, and group facilitator.

The 3 main toolboxes we use – the Ego-Functions, Character Structures and Ego Aspects – gives a lot of opportunities of developing skills for yourself and your clients.

In these 3 days we will play, dance, and talk about specific muscles in the body around the theme of Attachment, self-awareness, and boundaries. The focus will be on the Serratus, Pectoralis and Deltoid muscles + some others.

- How do these muscles work together

- How to develop skills to be and feel connected and build healthy relationships?

- How to sense the deep heart contact and connect there from

- Which other muscles can enhance these skills from earlier or later Character Structures

In my many years as a Bodydynamic Therapist and teacher I have seen the impact it has had on a person to work and deepen into mm. serratus, mm. pectoralis and mm. deltoideus - activated from early age and will be easily affected by trauma through our life.

The anatomical functions and the Ego Functions Connectedness, Boundaries and Interpersonal Skills will be dealt with theoretically and experientially. How to work with them, wake them up, strengthen them or make them more flexible physically and psychologically to enrich our relationships and inner self.
